

Clayton B. McCullough

Clay's practice is focused on litigation, with an emphasis on commercial law, construction law, personal injury, products liability, and appellate law. He also serves in an advisory capacity to local businesses and homeowners associations, including serving as corporate counsel for the Windswept Villas III Homeowners Association, Source Substrates, LLC and the Charleston School of Law. He is a Columbia, S.C., native and now lives in Charleston with his wife, Catherine and two children, Cameron and Rodgers.

Prior to joining Pratt-Thomas Walker in 2001, Clay clerked for the Honorable Thomas Cooper, a S.C. Circuit Court Judge. He then had an active products liability litigation practice in Columbia before relocating to Charleston.

Areas of Practice

Commercial litigation
Construction litigation
Administrative law
Trial and appellate law
Personal injury litigation
Corporate Counsel

Admitted to Practice

South Carolina
United States District Court for the District of South Carolina
United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit

Professional Memberships and Distinctions

American Bar Association
American Association for Justice
Charleston County Bar Association
South Carolina Bar Association

Education

Clemson University, B.S. in Marketing, 1993
University of South Carolina School of Law, J.D., 1997 (Projects Editor, ABA Real Property, Probate and Trust Journal; 1997 University of South Carolina National Trial Competition Champion; 1996 S.C.T.L.A. Mock Trial Finalist).

Publications

Co-Authored 2009 Update to South Carolina Damages Chapter entitled "Tort Damages Involving Property".